The band was mounted by earliest dawn; and as the notes of the bugle died away, our horses plashed through the river, crossing to the other side. We soon debouched from the timbered bottom, coming out upon sandy plains that stretched westward to the Mimbres mountains. We rode over these plains in a southerly direction, climbing long rides of sand that traversed them from east to west. The drift lay in deep furrows; and our horses sank above the fetlocks as we journeyed. We were crossing the western section of the Jornada. We travelled in Indian file. Habit has formed this disposition among Indians and hunters on the march. The tangled paths of the forest, and the narrow defiles of the mountains, admit of no other. Even when passing a plain, our cavalcade was strung out for a quarter of a mile. The atajo followed, in charge of the arrieros. For the first day of our march, we kept on without nooning. There was neither grass nor water on the route; and a halt under the hot sun would not have refreshed us. Early in the afternoon, a dark line became visible, stretching across the plain. As we drew nearer, a green wall rose before us; and we distinguished the groves of ottonwood. The hunters knew it to be the timber on the Paloma. We were soon passing under the shade of its quivering canopy; and reaching the banks...
