It is intended that these chapters shall be given in the classroom at the time of the year when suitable material will be available for the corresponding laboratory practice periods, though each chapter, being complete within itself, allows the assignment of the chapters in any order the teacher may choose. Working diagrams and photographs are provided for these practice periods, in order that the work of the teacher may be lightened. Suggestions are made for library references for the laboratory periods which should accompany each lesson, and outline suggestions are given for two major projects, with two minor projects that dovetail together. There is also included a school demonstration to show that crossbreeding for two generations means scrubs. In addition to the twenty-two lessons and the twelve laboratory exercises accompanying them, thirty-two additional laboratory exercises are suggested, together with fourteen skills. Under the above arrangement, it is believed that a complete course, so far as it goes, can be given in twenty-five periods only and that, by additional laboratory exercises and skills, these hours can be stretched to fifty or even seventy-five or a hundred periods, should it be the desire of the teacher to do so. Many of the laboratory exercises will extend over at least two periods if the work is completed satisfactorily: for example, the construction of the combination sitting and brooding coop.
