

The Red House on Isla Vista (Paperback)

By M Eli Milakovich

Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . The decade that began so brilliantly for so many young Americans ended in a drug-induced inner-space nightmare on the streets of America and in the rice paddies of Southeast Asia. Militant anti-communist politicians took full advantage of our inherited patriotism with few moral boundaries or even fewer consistent values. The Sixties produced the best music and the worst politicians ever. Nobel Laureate Bob Dylan, The Beatles, Country Joe McDonald and the Fish, Jefferson Airplane, Jim Morrison and the Doors, Joan Baez, and the Rolling Stones would have never achieved fame during the ensemble brassiness of the Big Band Era or within the confines of the syncopated rhythms of the Fifties. Rock musicians offered the truth, but politicians deceived in the cruelest way-using the draft as a stick and patriotism as a carrot-to engage in bloody crusades against imaginary threats to capitalism, democracy, and freedom which blew in from Southeast Asian windmills. During this twisted decade, American society was fundamentally and irreparably shattered by three prominent occupants of the White House: John F. Kennedy, the visionary scion too rich and too bold...
