FireStep Publishing, United Kingdom, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. One of the many under-appreciated despatch riders of his day, Oswald Harcourt-Davis (1882-1962) joined the Corps of Royal Engineers in 1916. He spent the majority of the war racing his Triumph motorcycle around the Somme and Ypres Salient areas, delivering urgent messages and writing whenever he could spare the time. A poet and novelist, Harcourt-Davis also wrote prolifically for the Daily Mail, the Times, Punch, Country Life, and the Birmingham Post. His greatest legacy, however, arguably is this posthumously published diary. With Triumph on the Western Front, Harcourt-Davis's great-nephew brings us the first and only diary of a World War I despatch rider. Each entry takes the reader further through his entire war journey, from recruitment in 1915 to demobilization in 1919. Sure to delight, this diary will interest military history lovers, World War I aficionados, or anyone curious about the wild lives of the wartime despatch riders.
